

Clow Water and McWane Poles Donate Utility Poles for Lighting at the Coshocton Airport Amphitheater

May 16, 2012

To some it might seem odd to have an amphitheater near an airport, but not the residents of Coshocton, Ohio. The idea of utilizing three acres of reclaimed airport land which formed a natural amphitheater evolved after an exploratory committee visited a similar facility near Logan, West Virginia. They are currently adding perimeter lighting to the Coshocton Airport Amphitheater and Clow Water and McWane Poles were happy to support the effort by donating seven ductile iron utility poles to provide lighting for the seating and parking areas. Frontier Power also joined the effort by volunteering to install the poles and update the current power box at the amphitheater.

At McWane, we are proud to continue the tradition of supporting the communities where our team members live and work.
